Satellite imaging has been used ① to match water temperature swirls drawn on a map of ocean currents made as long ago as 1539. The map was produced by a Swedish cartographer, Olaus Magnus. It had been thought that the rounded swirls, located between pictures of serpents and sea monsters, ② was there for purely artistic reasons. However, the size, shape, and location of the swirls matches changes in water temperature too ③ closely for this to be a coincidence. The map is likely to be an accurate representation of the ocean eddy current ④ found to the south and east of Iceland. It ⑤ is believed that the map-maker collected his information from German mariners of the Hanseatic League.

For decades, the Atlantic Ocean's ① fabled Bermuda Triangle has seized the human imagination with unexplained disappearances of ships, planes, and people. Some speculate that unknown and mysterious forces account for the disappearances, such as extraterrestrials ② capture humans for study, or the influence of the lost continent of Atlantis. Other explanations are more grounded in science, if not in evidence, such as disruptions in geomagnetic lines of flux. Environmental considerations could explain ③ many, if not most, of the disappearances. The majority of Atlantic tropical storms and hurricanes pass through the Bermuda Triangle, and in the days prior to improved weather forecasting, these dangerous storms claimed many ships. Also, the Gulf Stream can cause rapid, sometimes violent, changes in weather, ④ while the large number of islands in the Caribbean Sea creates many areas of shallow water that can be treacherous to ship navigation. The ocean has always been a mysterious place to humans, and when foul weather or poor navigation is involved, it can be a very ⑤ deadly place. This is true all over the world. [3점]

It may be difficult for adults to learn not to ① interfere but rather to support a child's desire for freedom and autonomy. For example, if you watch a boy of three trying to tie his shoes, you may see him work with extraordinary motivation even though the loops aren't matched, and well over half the time as he tries for the final knot, he ends up with two ② separate laces, one in each hand. Then watch his parents as they watch their child attempt a task like this. Too often the parent will step in and take over, tie the shoes the "right way," and ③ nurture the child's growing attempt at self-mastery. The same goes for putting on boots, coats, and even playing with toys. It is also exceedingly easy to fall into the trap of almost always responding ④ negatively to a child at this age. Commonly, a parent might say no up to 200 times a day at this stage. Such nagging not only is aversive in the extreme, but also a constant ⑤ reminder to the child of his or her lack of self-control.

A French manufacturer of automotive accessories kept urging the German managing director of its subsidiary in Germany to advertise their product on German television. The German manager resisted for two reasons: he knew the target audience watched little television and the product was new in Germany. He suggested print ads instead. Finally, he gave in to the constant pressure from the Paris home office, but he decided to run a controlled test by advertising in four different media — television, radio, billboards, and print ads — simultaneously. The print ads were far and away the most effective. Why? Print ads permitted the company to describe in great detail the many features of the new product and to back up the description with the almost encyclopedic details that appealed to German consumers, who would otherwise have been skeptical because of its newness.

Since what you make of your life is up to you, you can either create a life filled with miraculous adventures or stay huddled and safe, never experiencing the joyful rush of journeying outside your world with boldness. A life devoid of adventure may be secure, but it is one that lacks texture and color. If you never venture forth, you can never expand and grow. Think about the adventures you have had in your lifetime. Those moments in which you took a leap of faith and expanded beyond your comfort zone are precious gifts, as they can remind you of the joy that is available to you when you embrace life with exuberance. These moments can be turning points in your personal history and inspire you to create new realities for yourself whenever you choose.

Many of the white colonialists openly despised New Guineans as “primitive.” Even the least able of New Guinea’s white “masters,” as they were still called in 1972, enjoyed a far higher standard of living than New Guineans. We all know that history has proceeded very differently for peoples from different parts of the globe. In the 13,000 years since the end of the last Ice Age, some parts of the world developed literate industrial societies with metal tools, other parts developed only nonliterate farming societies, and still others retained societies of hunter-gatherers with stone tools. Those historical _____ have cast long shadows on the modern world, because the literate societies with metal tools have conquered or exterminated the other societies. The literature of an oppressed people reflects the conscience of man, and nowhere is this seen with more intense clarity than in the literature of African-Americans. ① An essential element of African-American literature is that the literature as a whole—not the work of occasional authors—is a movement against concrete wickedness. ② In African-American literature, accordingly, there is a grief rarely to be found elsewhere in American literature, and frequently a rage rarely to be found in other American letters. ③ Whenever an African-American author picks up a pen, his target is likely to be American racism, his subject the suffering of his people, and the core element his own grief and the grief of his people. ④ Some authors fall in line with the non-violent “love thy neighbor” approach of prominent African-American leader Martin Luther King, Jr. ⑤ Almost all of African-American literature carries the burden of protest.

Many teens experience a very real fear of being rejected by their peers for attempting to take on daunting tasks and failing at them. This fear has caused many teens to quit striving for the things they want to achieve in life. Life is too short to worry about the possibility of failure. Teens must learn to overcome their anxiety of failure because many of life's lessons are learned from failing. The best advice to give to teenagers with this anxiety is that time will heal all wounds. Many years from now their peers may not even remember the thing that they attempted and failed. Some teens may want to do or achieve great things, but they have a hard time overcoming their fear of failure. In this case, a school guidance counselor, parent, or other trusted adult may be able to help them through this fear.

We constantly hear of damage done by computer viruses and other malicious programs, but even the best virus protection software cannot prevent a home personal computer from being stolen. Thus, computer security starts by protecting the facilities that house computers and computer data. This problem is especially acute in industry. Many a company can be wiped out if its computers or especially if its sensitive data are stolen or damaged. Damage can be intentional, inflicted by a criminal or a disgruntled employee; or accidental, caused by fire, power failure, or broken air conditioning. The solution is to physically protect this sensitive asset. A home should have an alarm system, and power to the computer should go through an uninterrupted power supply. A commercial entity should have a secure computer facility, with controlled access, heavy doors, card-operated locks, security cameras, and an automatic fire system.

Even the most determined of parents can find it a challenge to encourage their child not to spend too long sitting in front of the television or computer. Furthermore, it can be very difficult to find alternative activities that children will find fun. Learning ballet can be an excellent solution as it provides many benefits for children. Any good dance school or dance academy will have well-managed lessons that are carried out in a safe and structured environment. These classes will challenge your child both physically and mentally, which will help focus their mind and maintain their interest. As their ability improves, so will their co-ordination, self-control, and discipline, which will in turn improve their self-confidence. Furthermore, it will provide a positive natural outlet for their abundance of energy. Learning ballet from an early age is particularly beneficial, as young children are far more receptive than adults. They find it easier to learn and also have far fewer inhibitions, so it's far less likely that they'll feel insecure or embarrassed about performing a particular move.

Soil erosion is one of the most common reasons for landslides, and therefore preventing it can help you reduce the risk of landslides. The foremost thing to do is to divert the discharge water away from slopes by constructing gutters and using sandbags. If there is no possibility of diverting, you can contain its speed by building small dams. The velocity of water determines how much soil is eroded, and hence containing its speed is bound to be helpful. It is important to make sure that you divert or contain the water flow and not stop it altogether, as stopping it will result in pressure build-up over a period, which might give in at some point in time. Never redirect storm drains or street gutters down a slope, even if it seems to be an easy way out. Instead you can use flexible pipes and divert this water in a safe manner.

The advances of modern medicine have done much to relieve suffering and advance human welfare, but modern medicine does not guarantee good health. Health is more than an absence of disease; it is a condition in which body and mind function efficiently and harmoniously as an integrated unit. Consequently, we must take an active part in achieving good health by assuming some responsibility for our own physical and emotional well-being. This means practicing such commonsense measures as eating properly, exercising moderately, and avoiding harmful excesses such as overeating, smoking, heavy drinking, or using drugs, which can disrupt physical or emotional well-being. Taking responsibility for one's health also requires using one's mind constructively, expressing emotions, and feeling good about oneself.

In recent years there has been a boom in mountain walking among senior citizens. Unfortunately, because many of these senior citizens have taken up this hobby later in life, they lack the skills that are usually gained through years of experience. Instead, they rely on commercial group tours led by mountain guides to take them to the summits of their dreams. But, as increasing numbers of tragic incidents show, joining a tour does not guarantee their safety when things go wrong. Clearly, it is not realistic to try to prevent senior citizens from climbing mountains. Indeed, people go to the mountains to experience a sense of freedom in the wilds of nature, and to restrict hiking activity with rules and regulations would destroy the very spirit of the activity. More _____ and personal responsibility may be one way forward. If practiced safely, mountain walking is beneficial for physical and mental health. When it comes to catching our attention, there are certain conditions which favor attention and others which hinder it. Other things being equal, the probabilities that any particular thing will catch our attention are in proportion to _____. This may be illustrated in a specific case as follows: I had a card of convenient size and on it were four letters. This card was exposed to view for one twenty-fifth of a second, and in that time all the four letters were read by the observers. I then added four other letters and exposed the card one twenty-fifth of a second as before. The observers could read only four of the letters as in the previous trial but in this exposure there was no certainty that any particular letter would be read. I then added four more letters to the card and exposed the letters as in the previous trials. Specific letters were noticed randomly, and the observers were still able to recall only four of the twelve letters. That is to say, up to a certain point all could be seen. When the number of objects (i.e., letters) was doubled, the chances that any particular object would be seen were reduced to fifty percent. When the number of objects was increased threefold, the chances of any particular object's being seen were reduced to thirty-three percent. [3점]

The temporary nature of alliances actually helps the balance of power system to remain operative. One of the key questions in cognitive psychology is how people represent knowledge about concepts such as ‘football’ or ‘love.’ Recently, some researchers have proposed that concepts are represented in human memory by the sensorimotor systems that underlie interaction with the outside world. These theories represent a recent development in cognitive science to view cognition no longer in terms of abstract information processing, but in terms of perception and action. In other words, cognition is grounded in embodied experiences. Studies show that sensory perception and motor actions support human understanding of words and object concepts. Moreover, even understanding of abstract and emotion concepts can be shown to rely on more concrete, embodied experiences. Finally, language itself can be shown to be grounded in sensorimotor processes. We can bring together theoretical arguments and empirical evidence from several key researchers in this field to support this framework. [3점]

That's one reason, for example, that people pay so much to be members of an exclusive as well as extravagant country club, even if they don't utilize the facilities.

Scientists call any group that people feel part of an "in-group," and any group that excludes them an "out-group." As opposed to the colloquial usage, the terms "in-group" and "out-group" in this technical sense refer not to the popularity of those in the groups but simply to the "us-them" distinction. (①) We all belong to many in-groups and as a result, our self-identification shifts from situation to situation. (②) At different times the same person might think of herself as a woman, an executive, or a mother, depending on which is relevant. (③) Both experimental and field studies have found, in fact, that people will make large financial sacrifices to help establish a feeling of belonging to an in-group they aspire to feel part of. (④) Once we think of ourselves as belonging to the country club or executive ranks, the views of others in the group seep into our thinking, and color the way we perceive the world. (⑤) Psychologists call those views "group norms," and seeing ourselves as a member of a group automatically marks everyone as either an "us" or a "them."

The explosion of creativity in the Renaissance was intimately tied to the recording and conveying of vast knowledge in drawings, graphs, and diagrams, as in the renowned diagrams of da Vinci and Galileo. Galileo revolutionized science by making his thought graphically visible while his contemporaries used only conventional mathematical and verbal approaches. Once geniuses obtain a certain minimal verbal facility, they seem to develop a skill in visual and spatial abilities that gives them the flexibility to display information in different ways. When Einstein had thought through a problem, he always found it necessary to formulate his subject in as many different ways as possible, including using diagrams. He had a very visual mind; he thought in terms of visual and spatial forms, rather than thinking along purely mathematical or verbal lines of reasoning. One day Joe Kohn, a sophomore, was reading the newspaper alone in a student lounge at MIT. Norbert Wiener, professor and renowned mathematician, entered the room and began to walk around. Presently he approached the somewhat intimidated Joe Kohn and said, "Young man! Do you play the game of chess?" Kohn allowed that he did, and Wiener exclaimed, "Then let us play a game of chess!" Kohn was scared to death, and sure that Wiener would make a fool of him. About fifteen moves into the game, Wiener moved his queen so that Kohn's pawn could take it. Kohn was _____. Surely Wiener was making a devilishly clever sacrifice and would then get a quick checkmate. Kohn spent twenty minutes feverishly peering at the board and trying to determine what Wiener was up to. Finally he said, "Professor Wiener, I'm stumped. Why are you sacrificing your queen?" Wiener's eyes grew wide and he said, "Oh my God. That's a mistake! Can I take that move back?" Of course Kohn let Wiener retract his move. It became rapidly clear that Wiener was actually quite an inept chess player, and he quickly lost.

Parents and teachers often report utter frustration with children who have attention deficit hyperactivity disorder (AD/HD), because they lie about obvious events. For example, a teacher may see a child take an object from another child's desk and put it in her desk. When (a) she questions her about it, the child denies that she took it and tends to blame someone else or shrug her shoulders. (b) She may also deny that she has homework, or that the teacher told her about a test. When the behavior persists, it is probably related to (c) her impulsiveness. In other words, the youngster will act on an idea that comes to mind without becoming conscious of it. For example, (d) she may see a nice pencil sharpener on another child's desk and say to herself, "I sure wish I had that pencil sharpener." The next thing she knows, it is in (e) her hand, and she never is aware of the process of taking it from the other child's desk! It is this same lack of conscious monitoring of behavior that causes children with AD/HD to blurt out embarrassing and outrageous statements or to be reported for having their hands all over other children. As a consequence of this disorder, children with AD/HD do a poor job of monitoring their behavior and, therefore, may be totally unaware of what they say or do in many instances.
